Roosevelt-Churchill Joint Statement Hints at Later Conference with Russia

Stalin Will Be Kept Fully Informed of Anglo-American Decision Insofar as They Concern the War against Germany and Italy; No Comment Made on Opening of New Fronts in Europe

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

QUEBEC, Que., Aug. 24 (P)—Disclosure that the Anglo-American conference here laid plans for the government of reconquered European territories, plus the issuance of a virtual invitation to Russia to join the next war meeting, made it apparent tonight that the pattern for invasion of Europe was nearly complete.

Ring down the curtain on the Quebec war council earlier in the day, President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill had projected the question of European invasion into the forefront of conference speculation by failing completely to make any reference to the general subject in an official statement on their deliberations.

They had, nonetheless, openly suggested the possibility that Russia would attend a three-power conference with them, knowing quite well that Russia's main concern is an Allied invasion to draw a maximum of German ground pressure off the Soviet front.

Invasion Seems Certain
Tonight's statement on the government of reconquered territories took invasion for granted. It was issued by a British official to a press conference. He asked that it be not otherwise identified but it was obvious that his information had come from the highest sources and was issued belatedly for some purpose not immediately explained.

"Apart from strictly military questions," the statement said, "the conference was able to devote its attention to the principles which should be observed in the administration of territories in Europe liberated by our forces from enemy domination."

It has of course always been recognized that the system which we have adopted with success on Italian territory (Amgot or Military Government in Sicily) cannot be applied to friendly territory and the problem will not be the same in cases where there is already a legitimate government with which the United States government and his Britannic Majesty's government are in friendly and regular relations.

"Consultations on this subject are being continued with the governments concerned."

Much of State's Surplus Will Go In Special Funds

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Aug. 24 (P)—Approximately $8,450,000 of the State's June 30 surplus of $12,600,931 has been or is being set aside for extraordinary payments incident to the war and for postwar construction needs, Governor O'Connor said today.

In effect, he stated, "the actual unencumbered surplus is approximately $4,000,000, and it is possible that further demands of the annuity bond fund may reduce this total somewhat."

He asserted that in no other fiscal year had it been possible to "earmark" such a large amount of state funds as was the case during the present fiscal year.

"Extraordinary" Allotments
Among what O'Connor termed as "extraordinary allotments" being charged against the surplus for this biennium were:

- $4,000,000 for postwar and emergency funds;
- $2,600,000 for bonus to state employees and teachers;
- $1,375,000 for increases to employees under the standard salary board schedule;
- $475,100 estimated to be necessary for transfer to the annuity bond fund as a result of the reduction in the state income tax rates for the years 1944-45.

Referring to the $8,450,000 allotment, he declared that it was approximately the amount of reversions to the state treasury from unexpended balances for the five fiscal years that have come to an end during his administration.

One of the first policies which O'Connor said he established in 1939 was that budget appropriations

Gestapo Takes Over Home Rule In Germany

Heinrich Himmler Is Appointed Chief of Reich Administration

LONDON, Aug. 24 (P)—Heinrich Himmler, the purge-chief whose orders have condemned thousands in his own country as well as in the Nazi-occupied lands of Europe, held all German home affairs except labor in the grip of the Gestapo under a governmental shift announced today.

The Administration of Labor was reported under the "immediate control" of Adolf Hitler.

The sudden shakeup of Hitler's high-ranking subordinates which gave Himmler apparently unprecedented powers was evidently a step to tighten the "iron hand" on a German morale shaken by steadily growing Allied aerial assaults.

Has Sweeping Powers
Announcement of the shakeup came in a DNB dispatch broadcast by the Berlin radio and recorded by the Associated Press. It said that Himmler, head of the SS Elite Guards and German police, also would serve as Minister of the Interior and "Chief of the Reich Administration."

Although the dispatch did not outline his tasks as administrative chief, the new title apparently placed sweeping home front powers in the hands of the man who once purged his own party, liquidated anti-Nazi opposition in Germany and "pacified" protesting patriots in occupied countries by mass slaughter.

The shakeup also switched control over the Bohemia-Moravia area in old Czechoslovakia, where Reinhard Heydrich's assassination last year ended his rule as "the hangman."

The DNB announcement said Himmler succeeded Reichminister Dr. Wilhelm Frick, who was to be shifted to the post of Protector of Bohemia and Moravia, relieving "at his own request" Baron Konstantin von Neurath, who has ruled over the area where hundreds perished in Nazi reprisals after Heydrich's assassination.

The Czechoslovak government-in-exile here declared the elevation of Himmler and Frick was an expression of Hitler's "desire to rally the old party gang and SS—invested with still more power—around himself."

"The iron hand," the government added, "is to be applied not only in Czechoslovakia but also in Germany proper."

Kierl Is Promoted
Also out "at his own request" in the German shakeup at home was Acting State Secretary Hans Kierl in the Ministry of Interior. He was appointed "minister without portfolio," DNB said.

Neurath and Pfundtner have long been powers in German officialdom. Prick's appointment also removed from the Czechoslovakian protectorate Col. Gen. of Police Kurt Daluege and State Secretary Karl Hermann Frank, who had been

Allies May Accept Rome as Open City under Certain Conditions

By LEWIS HAWKINS

LONDON, Aug. 24 (P)—A Swiss dispatch said today that Britain and the United States had notified Pope Pius XII they would accept Rome as an open city under certain conditions, principally a Vatican guarantee and a Swiss commission supervising demilitarization.

The dispatch, written by the Rome correspondent of the Basler Nachrichten, could not be confirmed in London. It was indicated here that any announcement must come from the Allied leaders in Quebec.

A broadcast by the Rome radio earlier in the day announced that Italy had formally advised the British and American governments that Rome had been cleared of military

Motor Express Company Driver Dies in Crash

Lee F. Evans Burns to Death in Truck Blaze West of Hancock

Lee French Evans, about 30, of North Mechanic street, driver for the Cumberland Motor Express Corporation, was fatally injured last evening about 10:15 o'clock when the twelve-ton truck and trailer he was operating overturned and was destroyed by fire at Cohill's, several miles west of Hancock on U.S. Route 40.

According to Maryland State Police, the driver was burned beyond recognition and his identity was not learned until early this morning when W. T. Conley, clerk at the local office of the company, said that Evans was the driver of the last truck which left Cumberland at 6:30 p. m., yesterday headed for Hagerstown with a load of wheelbarrows and macaroni.

A Washington county deputy sheriff, who appeared on the scene shortly after the accident occurred, said that the truck was ascending a hill and the driver apparently lost control, causing the machine to turn over and burn.

State police said that it was necessary to saw part of the cab of the truck away to extricate the badly burned body of the driver.

Evans, who had been employed by the Cumberland Motor Express Company for several months, is married and has one child.

He is the son of Samuel Evans of 603 Kent avenue, Baltimore and Ohio railroad engineer, who was injured last month when a locomotive and seven passenger cars were derailed in Versailles township, Pa., near Pittsburgh.

Indians-Boston Split

CLEVELAND, Aug. 24 (P)—Heber (Dick) Newsome shut out Cleveland's Indians with two singles as the Boston Red Sox notched a 7 to 0 triumph in the second game of a two-night double header tonight.

The Tribesmen copped the opener 5 to 2 with Alie Reynolds doing out five hits.

Installations and sought treatment as an open city.

Allied Planes Drop Leaflets
The Swiss story said that the Allies had notified the Papal Secretary of State that they agreed in principle to the declaration of Rome as an open city. However, conditions were reported listed to insure that the city remained out of the war.

Italian government authorities were quoted as saying they knew nothing of the replies, which were not mentioned in the censored Italian press.

Allied planes were again reported over Rome, dropping leaflets and flares for photography, but not attacking. The only alarm sounded

American Planes Continue Attacks On Southern Italy

By REELMAN MORIN

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, Aug. 24 (P)—Italy's southern railway system—already virtually knocked out of military usefulness—was blasted again Monday in three-ply attacks with not a single fighter of the battered Axis air forces challenging the raiders in the Naples area.

United States Liberators striking heavily from the Middle East at Bari in Southeastern Italy, however, butted into swarms of enemy defenders and shot down fourteen without loss to themselves. This boosted the toll of Axis planes over Italy to 149 in five days.

American Mitchell medium bombers heaped new ruin on Battipaglia south of Naples by daylight yesterday. Allied headquarters announced, and RAF and RCAP Wellingtons roared in before dawn today to smash at railroad targets at Bagnoli in Naples' suburbs.

P-40 Warhawks meanwhile ranged over Sardinia, also meeting no fighter opposition, to attack barracks and factories near the capital of Cagliari with bombs and cannonfire. From these and the Naples sweeps, one Allied plane was missing.

Aerial reconnaissance showed railroads and installations in Southern Italy were so badly broken that the Germans would have a serious and perhaps insurmountable problem in trying to move a large army south and keep it supplied by rail.

Four Navy Men Are Killed in Crashes

NORFOLK, Va., Aug. 24 (P)—Four navy men, two officers and two enlisted men, were killed today when two planes collided at sea and another crashed at Fentress in Norfolk county.

The dead are Ensign William E. Maher, USNR, of Flushing N. Y.; Ensign F. D. Henderson, USNR, of Port Worth, Tex.; Chief Aviation Radioman H. F. Rand, of Lynn, Mass., and Aviation Pilot First Class Kenneth W. Johann, of Des Moines, Iowa.

Maher and Henderson, who were piloting separate planes, were killed at sea during maneuvers, according to an announcement by the public relations officer of the Fifth Naval district. Their planes collided. The bodies of neither of the victims had been recovered tonight.

Rand and Johann composed the crew of a navy land plane which crashed at Fentress.

Woman Reports to Work Eight Hours After Child Is Born; Is Sent Home

BALTIMORE, Aug. 24 (P)—War plant ruling upset 42-year-old Mrs. Helen Robar's plan to return to the night shift five hours after her eighth child was born, but she won't "just sit around" until her enforced sixty-day furlough is ended.

Mrs. Robar, a resident of nearby Owings Mills, said today she would look for an interim job because "I can't just do nothing with my husband and son overseas." Her husband is a sergeant in the Canadian

Four Persons Are Arrested by FBI For Aiding Nazis

Doctor, Two Women Held in Detroit, Merchant Mariner in New York

DETROIT, Aug. 24 (P)—Charged with giving war information to Nazi Germany, two men and two women, one of the latter described as an "attractive well-educated descendant of French nobility," were arrested by the Federal Bureau of Investigation today and held for trial under the Wartime Espionage act which carries a possible death penalty.

Arrested in Detroit were Grace Buchanan-Dineen, 34, sometimes called "Countess Buchanan-Dineen," Dr. Fred William Thomas, 44, prominent obstetrician, and Theresa Behrens, 44, in New York, the FBI arrested Bertrand Stewart Hoffman, 27, a member of the merchant marine. Also held in Detroit were two women whose names were withheld but whom the FBI said were citizens of Germany.

Bond Is $50,000

Bonds of $50,000 each were set for Miss Buchanan-Dineen, Mrs. Behrens and Dr. Thomas, upon their arraignment before United States Commissioner J. Stanley Hurd. The two women stood mute while Dr. Thomas pleaded innocent. Mrs. Behrens is to go on trial September 14. Dr. Thomas September 16, and Miss Buchanan-Dineen September 17. The unidentified German aliens were held for a hearing before the Alien Enemy Hearing board in Detroit.

Miss Buchanan-Dineen was accused in the FBI complaint of securing and trying to give to the German government vital information concerning the Ford Motor Company, its production capacity on war material, the safety of the plants against sabotage and air attacks and the operation plans of the United States by which military airplanes departed from this country for the war theater.

Mrs. Behrens was accused of securing information regarding production activities of the Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing Company of Chicago, and transportation of war materials.

Dr. Thomas was charged with securing information as to the number and location of certain plants of the Western Electric Company in Ohio, manufacturing war materials. The charge against Hoffman, who

Russian Troops Continue Advance Toward Poltova

Slash Ahead from Kharkov; Soviet Pincers Threaten Nazi Salient

By WILLIAM SMITH WHITE

LONDON, Wednesday, Aug. 25 (P)—Russian forces racing westward from captured Kharkov in an unchecked offensive aimed at Poltova inflicted heavy blows on the reeling German army yesterday and threw the Nazi forces into a retreat bordering on a rout, Moscow announced today.

"Arms and material were abandoned by the Germans on the battlefield," said the midnight communique as the Red army columns northwest, west and south of the city lunged on toward Poltova, seventy-five miles to the southwest, and perhaps even aimed for Kiev, keypoint of the German Dnieper river line 250 miles away.

Keeping pace with the new victories almost 200 miles to the north, Russian forces which broke through the German Donets line to open a new battle front continued their gains both southwest of Voroshilovgrad and south of Izium.

Thousand Germans Slain

Several populated places fell to the Red army, which only yesterday was disclosed to have smashed through from eighteen to twenty-two miles in a major breakthrough near Voroshilovgrad that threatened to entrap Nazi forces occupying the iron and coal regions of the Donets Basin, said the Soviet daily communique, recorded by the Soviet Monitor.

South of Izium, the other column hammering into the Donets stormed into a heavily-fortified Nazi strong point after overcoming fierce resistance and killing a thousand defenders, the Russians said. Booty and prisoners were taken and thirty-three German planes were shot down during the day's battles there, said the Russian report.

Altogether, the Russians said, almost 4,000 Germans were killed yesterday as they fell back from Kharkov and the Donets river.

New successes on the Bryansk front, where stubborn German resistance has slowed the conquerors of Orel, also were reported by the Russians.

"Our detachments drove the enemy from four populated places" there, the communique said, and added that at another point the Russians broke into German trenches.

The momentum of Russia's first great summer offensive carried even to the northern sectors yesterday, where the report said about 400 Germans were killed on the Leningrad front and big Soviet guns crushed blockhouses and dugouts.

Sink Two Transports

The big rifles of Russia's Northern fleet also struck at the invader yesterday and, in co-operation with the air arm, sank two German transports totaling 8,000 tons, a patrol ship and a patrol launch, the war bulletin said.

Kharkov's fall Monday apparently was the signal for renewed activity along the entire 2,000-mile front, for the Russians said they destroyed seventy-five German tanks and shot 106 Nazi planes from the skies during that day.

12-Car Train Carries Mail to Soldiers

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, Aug. 24 (P)—Headquarters announced today that a new twelve-car mail train was now carrying letters from home to Allied soldiers across North Africa at the rate of 250,000 pounds a month.

The train devoted exclusively to mail carrying, supplements sea and air transportation. A total of 4,744 pouches were moved to the soldiers in the first two weeks of August.

Official Quarters Remain Silent On Report Welles Has Resigned

By WADE WERNER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24 (P)—The State department would neither confirm nor deny tonight published reports that Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles had resigned.

Welles himself was at Bar Harbor, Me., ostensibly for a few days rest. He replied there in inquiries about the report by saying "absolutely no comment."

There was no comment from Secretary of State Hull, absent in Canada, nor from the White House. As a result of this noncommittal reaction in official quarters, Welles' absence stirred recollection of rumors and reports reaching back over more than a year to the effect that he and Hull did not see eye to eye and that the upshot of it all

Liberators Hit Wewak with 112 Tons of Bombs

Artillery Opens Up on Japanese at Bairoko in New Georgia

By WILLIAM F. BONI

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, Wednesday, Aug. 25 (P)—Artillery has opened up for the first time on Japanese making a last ditch stand at Bairoko, New Georgia, in the Solomons after American troops succeeded in scoring substantial advances northward from the captured Munda airfield.

This success in moving up the field pieces was reported today from headquarters of Gen. Douglas MacArthur along with a 112-ton raid Tuesday by Liberators at the other arm of the Pacific war front on Wewak, New Guinea, where more than 300 Japanese planes were destroyed last week.

The ground campaign to oust the last Japanese from New Georgia has been in progress ever since the Munda strip was seized Aug. 5, some ten miles south of Bairoko.

Above New Georgia, Japanese planes tried to raid Vella Lavella island which American forces occupied Aug. 15. Nine of the raiders were shot down.

The Liberators attacking Wewak were escorted by long range fighters. Against such a formidable force, the Japanese fighters showed a reluctance to attack in contrast with the raids last Friday and Saturday when numerous enemy interceptors were encountered and more than thirty were shot down.

BY RICE YAHNER

LONDON, Wednesday, Aug. 25 (P)—American Flying Fortress which made the first daylight shuttle raid on Germany, Aug. 17, blasted an aircraft assembly plant in Bordeaux, France, yesterday on the return leg of their journey which brought them from North Africa to their home bases in Britain, it was officially announced today.

This latest demonstration of the increasing range of American air power coincided with the opening of the major Allied air drive against Berlin Monday night when approximately 700 RAF bombers "Hamburged" the German capital.

Double Shuttle Raid

The Fortresses which made it a double-shuttle raid by blasting Bordeaux yesterday, penetrated deep into the Reich on their outward trip to hit an airplane factory in Regensburg on Aug. 17.

Other Fortress formations attacked three airfields in France late yesterday.

Even as this most complex twenty-hour assault of aerial warfare was rounded out, German radios went silent again—a string indication that the Reich, perhaps Berlin, was getting a second successive plastering.

In Monday's raid on Berlin, the Allied command fashioned a scale of destruction twice the weight of any ever heaped on any capital, and not far short of the weight of the attacks which swept Hamburg from the war in ten days. More than 2,000 tons of bombs were dropped.

The Fortresses which attacked the three Nazi airfields in France operated from Britain. The communique announcing the return of the shuttle-bombers from North Africa said, in part:

A sky-filling fleet of RAF and Canadian bombers roared on the 1,200 miles round-trip flight to the Reich's heart with 1,800 long tons (2,016 United States tons) of bombs. Fifty-eight of the four-engine ships—the most ever lost in one night—were shot down.

Some American volunteers participated in the assault.

Today, heavy bombers which looked like American Flying Fortresses swept back over the channel in renewal of the long-planned, thunderous offensive.

Immense Damage Inflicted
The Berlin attack was at least four times as heavy as any ever suffered by London, and was driven home with concentrated effect that left immense damage in the capital.

Liquor Is Being Taken to Virginia From Maryland

BALTIMORE, Aug. 24 (P)—Maryland and Virginia liquor law enforcement officials said today that a considerable liquor traffic from Maryland to Virginia has been discovered and that efforts to stop it were being instituted.

The traffic was described to be illegal under Virginia law which prohibits anyone from bringing more than a gallon of whisky into the state at a time, but legitimate under federal and Maryland law.

G. Stanley Clark, counsel of the Virginia State Alcoholic Beverage Commission, said there was "quite a bit of it going on by boat and in trucks and automobiles despite the watchfulness of our large enforcement divisions and state police."

"Anyone apprehended while transporting liquor into the state is dealt with severely. To begin with, the liquor and car or truck is confiscated, the persons charged is liable to a fine up to $500 or a year in jail or both, and in addition he may be required to put up a $1,000 bond for good behavior for a year."

He added that enough liquor had been confiscated recently to fill a state warehouse, adding that whisky thus seized is sold through the state stores, with proceeds going to the literary fund of Virginia, which makes loans for educational purposes.

Roger V. Laynor, of the Alcoholic Beverages division of the Maryland comptroller's office, said that most of the liquor being taken into Virginia was carried by automobile or truck, or by boat on the Chesapeake. The traffic was reported to have

Germans Occupy Danish Capital As Riots Spread

Finnish Factions Agree "Peace at Any Price" Is Undesirable

By POHN H. COLBURN

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 24. (P)—German troops 40,000 to 50,000 strong rolled into Copenhagen before dawn Saturday to take over the capital of their Danish "model protectorate." It was learned tonight, as riots, strikes and outbreaks raged unabated in protests against Nazi occupation.

At the other end of the Baltic sea, Finland—Germany's ally against Russia—sought new means to step out of the struggle and agitation by labor and pro-Allied groups to obtain a separate peace progressed slowly. All factions agreed, however, that they did not want "peace at any price."

Saturday's troop movements into Copenhagen, disclosed in press dispatches from that Nazi-dominated kingdom, were explained to the Danish government only as a "re-creation" movement.

They took over public halls, sports buildings and schools as barracks. The contingent was the largest ever quartered in Copenhagen and the soldiers drained food and other supplies from stores to the extent that housewives had difficulty getting food, the dispatches said.

5,000 Protest Movement
It was believed here, however, that if Germany hopes to end the wave of extraordinary demonstrations against German influence she may have to assume full military control of the country, and the Copenhagen move seemed to be in this direction.

There was no indication the government would go beyond its appeal of Aug. 21 to the people to halt such violence, which was in effect a refusal to yield administration of justice to the Nazis who had demanded that saboteurs be tried under German law.

It was reported that the new divisions rushed to Copenhagen had been moved from Norway.

Five thousand persons, protesting the new troop movement, were reported to have paraded through the streets of Odense carrying American, British and Danish flags.

Girls who had gone with German soldiers were reported to have been disrobed and red Swastikas were painted on their cheeks.

Shops of German sympathizers in Odense were plundered and their owners were taken to the country in protective custody by the Danes as a general strike continued to tie up the city, the reports said.

Meanwhile, half a dozen additional Danish cities were under a state of emergency, placed there by the Nazi occupation troops who faced new troubles in their attempt to put down the "people's revolt" against them.

The principal stumbling block for establishing a basis for Russo-Finnish peace negotiations appeared to be the reluctance of the Finns to contact the Soviets directly with an offer. The Finns have tried unsuccessfully to get America to obtain terms from Russia which maintain that Finland should make the first step.

RAF Opens

tal. It was staged as though to give Berliners a powerful dose of explosive and fire bombs before the finale of the Allied victory conferences at Quebec.

A clear night favored German fighters who swarmed in great droves. "O number" of them were destroyed, the air ministry said.

Living in fear since Hamburg was ripped apart less than a month ago, Berlin undoubtedly is the focal point of the German air force's principal night-fighter squadrons.

The RAF did not disclose the size of the armada, but a censorship-approved dispatch from Lowell Bennett, American correspondent at a Midlands bomber base, said "some 5,000 veteran RAF fliers from over the empire and some American volunteers" took part, tumbling the bombs down in forty-two minutes.

Since the RAF heavy bomber usually carries seven men, this indicated a raiding force of more than 700 planes.

Some returning crewmen said the block-buster bombs left fires raging over a four-square mile area, and one reported smoke spiralling up four miles.

An air ministry communique said "the assault was delivered in clear weather just before midnight and preliminary reports indicated that the bombing was highly concentrated."

The German high command admitted civilian losses and said "explosive and incendiary bombs caused destruction in the residential quarters and to public buildings and hospitals." It declared that at least sixty bombers had been downed, and that "re-organized air defenses prevented a concentrated attack upon the city."

It was the first heavy assault upon the German capital since March 29. The heaviest previous bomb load dropped was 900 long tons.

The biggest explosions rocked the heart of Berlin, the fliers said. Most described anti-aircraft fire as light.

"The Germans put up swarms of fighters," one airman said. "I have never seen so many before. There were about twenty belts of searchlights inside the capital and around it. These were co-operating with the fighters."

Roosevelt-

on Europe—especially in the Balkan areas where there are conflicting claims to the right to govern.

Another political indication that the time for attack on Europe was close at hand was found in a formal statement by Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill that consideration had been given to relations with the French Committee of Liberation and that announcements on this subject by a member of the government would be made later this week.

Russia was virtually invited by the president and the prime minister to attend the next Anglo-American conference, which it has been decided to hold before the end of the year.

Meanwhile, the two Allied statesmen declared, Russia will be kept fully informed of Anglo-American decisions, obviously including those made here, insofar as they concern the war against Germany and Italy.

The Russian bid was extended in a joint statement in which Churchill and Roosevelt reported that at Quebec "the necessary decisions have been taken to provide for the forward action of the fleets, armies and air forces" of Britain and America. They kept inviolate the secrecy cloaking the new blows which such decisions portend.

With the speeded tempo of the war, however, more decisions are expected to become necessary in a relatively short time and the joint statement said that "it was resolved to hold another conference before the end of the year between the British and American authorities."

It was in this connection that open and official reference was made to a joint meeting with Russia in such manner as to suggest that Stalin actually was being asked to participate—perhaps with prior knowledge that he would do so.

The statement said the Anglo-American meeting this year would be held "in addition to any tripartite meeting which it may be possible to arrange with Soviet Russia."

The plans for closer collaboration with Russia focused attention on the European phases of Quebec planning. But on these phases, Messrs. Roosevelt and Churchill were completely and significantly silent. They had no comment, even most indirectly, about the opening of new fronts in Europe, which Russia has been hotly demanding for months.

By contrast their joint report emphasized the plans laid for cracking down on Japan, they declared that "the military discussions of the Chiefs of Staff turned very largely upon the war against Japan and the bringing of effective aid to China."

This tied in with informed belief in some quarters here that plans had been worked out for greatly expanding the American Air Force in China and undertaking long before the projected Burma offensive can be cleaned up, an aerial offensive against Japan and her lifelines in the China Sea.

Another development of the formal statement was the disclosure that the internal status of the French Committee of Liberation had been considered here and some statement in which several governments will participate will be issued later this week. This apparently foreshadowed some form of recognition or other diplomatic status.

At the press conference at which the formal report was given, Churchill, who spoke first, said there was great cause for optimism at the present stage of the war.

The Problem Of Germany

SOME DAY SOON — probably within the next twelve months—Germany will fall. Does any American know today what measures are being planned for the reconstruction of Germany? Is the shooting of Hitler the only known goal? Are the Allies thinking of a new attempt at a democratic Germany? Or a monarchy? Or the idea of a super free state?

The problem of Germany is the problem of the world. Yet how many Americans have studied the problem? How many Americans remember that in the days before Hitler came to power Germany, aside from Russia, was the most socialistic nation in the world? Do they know that, before Hitler, from a third to a half of all German business was owned by the government? Today, of course, the ownership is virtually 100 per cent.

Probably no one has the real answer to the problem of Germany. The Germans themselves have never been able to decide whether they are a nation or a race. Bismarck built the empire when he forced twenty-two separate dynasties to accept the Prussian king's sovereignty. But that did not do away with tribal instincts. The Bavarians held the "Pig Prussians" in contempt. And to the Prussians, there was nothing lower than the "Bavarian Barbarians."

Class distinctions were born in Germany. The famous wine, beer and schnaps divisions have been accepted for generations. Most Americans would have been shocked if they could have seen the old German hostels, with their rich, red plush-lined rooms for the wine drinkers, their modest brown-tinted sections for the beer drinkers, and their plain wood for the lower schnaps class.

Despite the fact that after World War I, there were 80,000,000 Germans scattered through half a dozen countries and swayed with a racial consciousness that defied all boundaries, Germany could still find no common denominator to make its democracy work. Americans seem to have forgotten that if the Kaiser had not fled, there might not have been a revolution at all.

The fact is that it was only seven years after the Kaiser abdicated that the German people voted to return to the members of the royal family all their old properties. And while the masses went hungry as a result of the Hohenzollern war, the Hohenzollerns were among the richest people in the world.

Germany's socialism brought collective mental and moral indigestion. On top of the heap were the labor unions and at the start Hitlerism was merely the counter-tool to end their sway. The upper and middle classes swung to Hitler to fight down the unions. And so Hitler came into power and like a Frankenstein swallowed his makers.

The United States, Britain and Russia proclaim they are fighting against the curse of Hitlerism. But what kind of Germany are they fighting to set up? On that may rest the answer to whether there will be World War III twenty years hence.

Another Important Item For The Postwar Era

A SERIOUS STAIN on the national escutcheon has been revealed in the recent report of the Senate Education and Labor subcommittee that almost 1,800,000 men have been turned down for military service because of illiteracy. The exact number of men rejected for educational deficiencies is not a matter of official record, but it is believed that of the 3,000,000 rejected for physical, educational and moral defects, one-third or more were educationally deficient.

From those men who were barred from military service because of illiteracy, the nation could have formed a sizable army. But because they have been denied access to education the military services cannot use them. It is true that special schools have been set up in several cities to eliminate illiteracy from small groups of men who are otherwise fit for service.

But it is not because of potential military service that these men deserve to be brought out of the darkness of illiteracy. It is because America is the loser when such a large number of its citizens are unable to participate in the political affairs of the nation because of their lack of knowledge of the very rudiments of reading and writing.

A nation of informed citizens can never be subjected to slavery. But a nation with as large an illiterate population as America seems to have can not be said to be truly informed and thus it can easily become a victim of machinations of preying demagogues.

One of the national aims for now and after the war should be the complete and effectual erasure of illiteracy from among those Americans to whom the opportunities for life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness are denied because they do not know how to obtain their birthright as American citizens. They must have their fetters of ignorance struck off.

An American Bomber With a "Lot of Man"

VERN HAUGLAND, the war correspondent, tells an amazing story of a B-25 bomber, damaged almost to the point of unmanageability in the raid on the Japanese base at Wewak, which still came back although only one of its crew was un wounded.

The pilot was wounded three times by shrapnel. The co-pilot had a head wound. The navigator was wounded in the face and arms. The tail gunner streamed blood from an arm wound. The only member of the crew to escape injury was the radioman-waist-gunner. He refused to bail out when the pilot said he could if he wanted to.

The fuselage of the plane had fifty-two holes in it. There was only a square foot left in one tail fin. There was no rudder control. About the only control the pilot had left was the throttle.

The radioman-waist-gunner treated his wounded crew mates. He bound up their wounds. He fixed their oxygen masks. He gave them morphine injections, although he had never had first aid instruction. He radioed for landing instructions. The wounded pilot made a perfect belly landing. The four wounded men were rushed to a hospital. The radioman-waist-gunner told about what they had been through.

"I tell you," he said, "there was a lot of man in that B-25."

There sure was, and the fact is symbolic of the American spirit and fortitude that will aid so materially in winning this war.

The Tough Job In the Pacific

SOME IDEA of the immensity of the task facing American fighters in the Pacific arena may be gained from reflection on the fact that more than a year has passed since the marines began carrying the fight to the Japs by landing on the island of Guadalcanal. Many weeks of desperate fighting had to be endured before the island, with its strategic air field, was safely in American hands.

With more than a year of fighting done in the Guadalcanal area, it must be borne in mind that the men in the South-west Pacific are still fighting on the perimeter of the Japanese defenses. Many more islands, including the heavily fortified bases of Rabaul and Truk, will have to be reduced in operations that may be costly in terms of both men and time.

Not all the Japanese-dominated islands will have to be captured piecemeal. It will be possible to by-pass some which can be immunized by persistent and heavy bombing, thus making it impossible for the Japanese to utilize their positions while the American attack is pressed home at another point.

It all adds up to a stiff, hard fight ahead. There is not yet discernible even the "beginning of the end" in this theater of war.

Hitler, Nazi admirers used to tell us, has the magical touch. Well, the German people ought to be getting pretty tired waiting for Adolf the Magician to pull that victory rabbit out of the hat.

Damage to Rumanian oil fields was heavier than first reports indicated, and there is always the possibility of a return engagement.

Follow Your Nose

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Follow your nose and it will take you to the Land of Far Away and Long Ago.

Follow your nose and it will dredge up long forgotten memories, buried under the clutter of the years. It will take you to a garden where a wobbling baby tumbled and fell and buried his small nose in a clovered lawn. The perfume of mint and roses and old-fashioned pinks. Sure as can be, your nose will take you to your farthest childhood.

You may remember a barn and alfalfa hay and the sweet breath of a cow named Bessie. Spices in your mother's pantry. Hot bread baking in the oven. Meat frying on old wood-burning stove. The smell of the gas house down by the river, where mothers took their children for relief from whooping cough. The nasty smell of curling fumes in a room that was being "fumigated" after someone was sick. The scent of the earth after a sudden rain, the acid odors from a vinegar works or the town tannery, or the spicy aromas that enveloped the town in the canning season. Your nose will remind you of the odorous past.

It will send your memories back to the brewery down by the river, and the warm sweet smell of the mash, and let you remember the stout brewers who worked in the cool darkness of that place. It will lead you to the wharf where the smell of the sea made many a boy dream of wandering far, to the town harness shop and the smell of leathers, to the warehouses where the fragrance of coffee filled the air, to a newspaper office and the smell of printer's ink. Keep following and it will lead you afar.

You'll remember new books on the first day of school and a certain perfume will remind you of a certain child who was Your Girl in high school dances and another perfume of a teacher you didn't like. It will take you to war and to dank barracks and stuffy transports and the odor of high explosives and the sweet blossomy perfume of poison gas and the stink of battlefields. And after a while it will bring you home again to other perfumes, other scents. Perhaps to a hospital with its ethers and its drugs and its rooms where children are born and women suffer and men wait. And of course to talcum powder that's put on babies where they seem to need it most.

See if I'm not right. Take a little time off and follow your nose and let it lead you across the world and across the years.

Inspection Method Fears Are Blamed For Aircraft Lag

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24—Careful examination of the testimony just taken by the Truman committee of the Senate as to the sensational drop in actual production at the Wright Aeronautical engine plant in Ohio makes tragic reading.

Here is a company which has been one of the two principal manufacturers of airplane engines ever since World War I and today has government contracts which in dollar volume are second only to General Motors. Now it suddenly develops that the army air corps command in charge of production and the company's management and the Truman committee are engaged in a controversy, endeavoring to establish responsibility for a drop of nearly eighty-five per cent in the production of engines per month in the largest of all seven engine plants.

The army air corps says the management at the Ohio plant wasn't quite strong enough. The Truman committee says the company's own inspection system wasn't efficient and the company president, Guy Vaughan, says that if the system is wrong it is one that has been in use for twenty years and whatever defects may have been found will be corrected as the management at the Ohio plant strives earnestly to achieve the production goal.

Some idea of the near catastrophe at this plant may be gotten by the fact that the plant was supposed to have a monthly production capacity of 2,000 and the War department hoped some day to attain by expansion of plant a 4,000 monthly production. Apparently if the schedule, for instance, called for 1,000 planes and an actual production in excess of 1,000 was reached last spring, then the drop-off in production brought last month's output down to about 150 engines.

Any such drop is a matter of crisis especially if the same state of mind which brought on the drop were to spread to other plants. What is the answer? Mr. Vaughan lays it, among other things, to fears developed inside his organization and among his employees with respect to the rigidity of inspection. Although Mr. Vaughan did not say so in as many words, it is plain that the whole series of investigations which began several weeks ago threw the situation at the Ohio plant "out of balance" and the swing has been to the extreme of caution in the inspection process. This went to such lengths that when the company supervisors began to take literally the warnings about lax inspection, they hesitated to approve certain motor parts and the assembly line started to bog down.

"Ridiculous" Order Rescinded

At one time when one of the company supervisors issued an order for stricter inspection, an army inspector thought it "ridiculous" inspection and immediately had the order rescinded by the company. All this led some senators to imply by their questions that some of the management were trying to justify what they had done and were trying to prove a case of alleged interference either by the army or the Truman committee.

This isn't the way to get engines made in larger and larger quantities for our far-flung battlefronts. There is something wrong that needs to be cured quickly or the production figures of August, September and October on bombing plane output will show a disappointing drop.

What the Truman committee does or says is taken to heart in all production plants where engines or aircraft parts are made. Unless fears are removed and morale is built up the struggle to get higher schedules will be in vain. In fact, it is a serious question whether the all-important factor of momentum which has been rising steadily since the outbreak of war has not been dealt a solar plexus blow already.

People the Victims

The American people are the victims of this frustration of production. The threat by Maj. Gen. Litvinoff's successor

LITVINOFF'S SUCCESSOR

Separate Peace between Germany and Russia Is Unthinkable, Mallon Says

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24—There is not the slightest evidence in the Russian military situation to suggest she could consider a separate peace — or, indeed, anything other than unconditional surrender.

The fall of Kharkov has been explained in a very tired way by the Germans as a withdrawal "according to plan." The truth is the city was the last key to the whole Nazi line of defense.

The city itself is probably in ruins and of little physical value, but its acquisition by the Russians opens up a lateral behind-the-lines railroad from Moscow through Orel and Kursk to Kharkov, a switching point which branches out in all directions to the south.

The Russians now no doubt will strike in a southwestern direction from Kharkov to threaten the long Nazi triangle running along the Black sea to a tip at Taganrog. The Russians are in a position to cut off this sector, and the Germans, no doubt, will have to evacuate it.

No Nazis Trapped

Their policy all along the line lately has been to put up a strong fight, holding strategic places as long as possible, but when faced with extinction now they no longer fight for hopeless positions but withdraw to save men. No Nazis have been trapped by the Russians this year.

No good defensive position now remains for them east of the Dnieper river. When they return to that, they will be nearly out of Russia.

Plenty of time remains before winter for the Russians to effect this result. Fighting around Kharkov last year continued until December snows. Russian drives for Bryansk and Smolensk may be hampered by weather before then, but the vital southern front is nowhere near closing.

The eager movement of Russian troops up to Kharkov showed no sign of weariness in men or material. While we have no military observers on the Russian front continuously (trips to the front have been allowed from time to time during the past eight months), authentic reports inspire an expectation that there is a chance that the Russians will now pick up speed. They had to call in some reserves for the final Kharkov action, but that was a minor matter.

Speed Check Vital

Naturally, the German general staff recognizes that unless this speed is broken by resistance in last-stage fights at key points, the German cause is hopeless. Naturally also, the Nazis would turn to thinking of a separate peace either with Britain and the United States on one hand, or with Russia on the other.

As no apparent separate peace proposals have been made to us, it is reasonable to suppose Hitler has been working on the Russians. Russian acceptance, however, is unthinkable because it would mean perpetuation of the Nazi military regime in most of Europe and really only an armistice before another attack in a year or two by either party.

In view of the military situation, Russia does not need a breathing spell and cannot afford to grant one to Germany.

Customary Objective

These Moscow diplomatic maneuvers are quite another thing (recall of Litvinoff, protesting about a second front, etc.). The mystical Russian foreign policy always is designed primarily to keep everyone guessing.

When we drag out our crystal balls and try to read the meaning of any Moscow move, (in war now or in peace later), we are not apt to get the right answer, but are only likely to confuse ourselves.

Never forget this: Stalin never moves in a direct line toward objective. He can drop Litvinoff one day, pick him up the next, never explaining either move to his people as our statesmen must, but only confusing the rest of the world while he moves in a zigzag line toward what he alone knows and wants.

One Sure Answer

Our people have been worried for months that Russia would make a separate peace, much more worried than has been publicly admitted. Such a peace would be disastrous to our current prospects, might make a war of five or ten years, or even eventually lose it for us.

They know Stalin is justly angry at the delay in the second front, for he has told visiting statesmen we could well afford to lose a million men in a futile stab at Western Europe, because it would bring full collapse of Germany on the Russian front, if not elsewhere.

But those who read the crystal ball, seeking sure answers to mystical Russian diplomacy, can be sure only of one answer—that is what they are supposed to do, keep on guessing.

Cut Out The Bunk

From the Connellsville, Pa., Courier

Eastern motorists never have been in accord with governmental restrictions on pleasure driving as applied to the gallon and a half weekly allowance. They have felt that so long as they are permitted to purchase the limited weekly supply there should be no strings tied to its use. The Keystone Automobile Club places the right stamp on OPA policy—a "puerile farce."

A telegram to OPA Director Prentiss Brown declares the program for the East to be illogical and, in spots, childish. Like in the West and Midwest and South, Easterners want to be permitted to use their allotments for whatever purpose they see fit. They are not saying they should be allowed the gallon and a half. They heartily agree that military needs should come first. They are, and will continue to be, resentful of un-American snooping and seizure of gas ration books by men who could be better employed in smashing the black market.

Motorists are a unit in the club's stand, namely that: "The whole thing narrows down to this—How much gas can we have after the military is fully supplied? Then let's have it without any more buncombe."

Is that unpatriotic? We can't see how!

Island Stepping Is Expected To End Soon in Pacific

By CENTRAL PRESS

WASHINGTON—America's present "island-to-island" campaign in the Pacific should end as soon as Allied forces capture or knock out the big Jap base at Rabaul, New Britain. Although the American forces have been moving slowly from island to island and for more than a year, Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox and his naval leaders have denied repeatedly that American strategy called for such a slow, costly campaign all the way to Japan.

However, this type of warfare was forced on Americans by the Japs when the enemy moved within striking distance of Australia. The current offensive on New Guinea and in the central Solomons has virtually secured the supply line to Australia and our forces are now within range of Rabaul by medium bombers and even fighter planes.

Back to Philippines

Once Rabaul is knocked out or taken, the best opinion in official quarters is that the expanded American forces may strike deep into enemy territory, possibly into the mandated islands and then back to the Philippines. A foothold there would cut off Japanese occupation forces in the East Indies, Burma and Indo-China from their home base and pave the way for a knockout blow against Japan.

There is also the possibility that the recent bombings of the northern Japanese Kurile islands will be followed eventually by a landing there, which would place American airmen within 1,200 miles of Tokyo.

Summed up, recent successes by American and Allied forces mean that bigger developments should be forthcoming in the Pacific soon.

Doctors Are Needed

For those "war-will-end-in-a-year" optimists whom President Roosevelt and other administration leaders are repeatedly cautioning, the War department had this significant announcement the day Cantania, Belgorod and Munda fell to Allied forces:

"The Army wants and needs 10,000 additional doctors by January 1, 1944."

To realistic observers this came as further indication that the toughest fighting, the heaviest casualties for American troops are yet to come.

More Meat Seen

Don't be surprised if meat point values are decreased — possibly in September—thus allowing you more meat for your ration stamps. At any rate, meat supplies are increasing at an encouraging rate, with federal food experts agreeing that things should get even better in the next few months. OPA spokesmen are cautious about predicting more generous meat rationing right away, but admit "it would be a fair guess that if supplies continue to go higher, point requirements will go down."

Polio To Increase

From the United States Public Health Service comes warning the present "minor" infantile paralysis epidemic will grow worse during August, reaching a peak sometime in September, expected to equal or surpass the disastrous 1934 rate, this year's cases already (the first seven months) have more than doubled those in 1942. More than 3,000 cases have been reported this year, with the most serious totals in California and Texas.

New Flour Ceiling

Yielding to heavy pressure by the Senate wheat "bloc," OPA is expected soon to announce adjustments in the price ceiling on flour. The move will NOT, it is believed, bring bread price increases because OPA plans to have the government pay a subsidy — probably to the millers—to absorb the rise. The wheat senators, led by Sen. Clyde Reed (R) Kan., have demanded that WPA Administrator Marvin Jones and Price Chief Prentiss Brown allow a rise in the flour ceiling to encourage wheat production. Wheat goal for next year—68,000,000 acres; about 14,000,000 acres higher than for 1943.

Tougher Board Is Expected

Look for a tougher War Labor Board now that it has police powers. Wise ones say John L. Lewis, bushy-browed mine union head, and Sewall Avery, head of United States Gypsum, both of whom have battled the board, may be the first to feel the might of the new power.

Colors Can't Be Heard

From the Altoona, Pa., Tribune

Since a blackout ought to be due almost any night now, we've begun worrying about our old trouble. We can't hear the difference between the red signal and the blue. They sound alike, even if they are different colors. The air raid whistles wail, O. K. They wail. But the red wail sounds just like the blue one to us.

In other words, we can't tell whether it's wailing red or blue. As a matter of fact, does it make any difference? Since we can't hear the difference between a red wail and a blue one, we'll just have to forget our difficulty in hearing colors, and blackout at the first wail.

The Tuesday raiders caused much damage near the airdrome and started numerous fires and explosions.

The tonnage dropped was a record for Wewak but fell short of the record for the New Guinea sector—177 tons loaded in a single raid on Salamaua.

The Wewak raiders, which struck yesterday morning, numbered approximately 100 planes. Returning pilots said they noted some enemy planes on the ground of various types and in various degrees of serviceability.

was a caution warning. Rome inhabitants were told to continue to go to the shelters.

The broadcast declaration that Rome now was an open city quoted a Stefani news agency summary of the note which it said was submitted to London and Washington through the Vatican and Swiss governments.

Defense installations have already been taken out of action and will be moved, the note said. Anti-aircraft batteries were ordered not to fire on aircraft over the city and Axis fighter planes were ordered to stay away from Rome.

The statement said Italian and German troops were leaving the city and only a garrison sufficient to maintain order would be left. The note said the rail system was barred to troop transport and munitions factories were to be transferred from the city.

Several questions were raised in London after the Italian announcement. These included:

Has the national government been moved from Rome? Has its telephone, telegraph and radio systems been closed to military traffic? Are all the network of railway lines around Rome being closed to troops and all forms of supply for the armies? Is all military production not just armaments — being moved?

Increase Is Expected In Spotted Fever

BALTIMORE, Aug. 24 (AP)—Dr. C. H. Halliday, epidemiologist for the state health department, warned today that forty-eight cases of Rocky mountain spotted fever, already reported in Maryland this year, may be increased by a few cases during September and October.

Eight deaths have occurred from the disease in 1943—a malady which is caused by the bite of an infected tick—but no fatalities have been reported since June.

were not to be spent unless absolutely necessary.

$371,000 Reverted
The sum of $371,000 was reverted for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1939, he said, but the four years following resulted in greatly enlarged reversions, totalling $879,000 for 1940, $1,103,000 for 1941, $1,030,000 for 1942, and $4,953,000 for 1943.

Much of the 1943 total, he continued, was due to the fact that the year was shortened by three months, but he stated that reversions for this year were $874,657.56 over the expected amount.

O'Connor, in his budget message to the legislature on January 18, 1943, predicted a surplus of approximately $2,000,000, and he said today that present indications were that the working fund would be increased by at least $1,500,000.

begun some time ago when Virginia's state-operated whisky stores rationed customers to one quart a month.

Large profits were reported being made through illicit sales in Virginia with prices ranging around $6 per pint.

Maryland officials expressed concern over the traffic in that it further cut an already limited whisky supply in the state.

Laynor said that since the federal and Maryland revenue laws were not being violated, the only possible way to stop the traffic at the Maryland end was for local liquor boards to apply pressure on the liquor retailers.

The liquor being transported was found to bear proper tax stamps—federal and Maryland—while Virginia authorities complained that it deprived that state of profits made through sales in state stores.

was stationed at the Grosse Ile Naval Training Station near here before being assigned to the merchant marine was that he, too, sought information concerning activities of the Ford Motor Company. The FBI also charged that he sought information concerning the United States shipping, which he furnished to Miss Buchanan-Dineen.

The arrests, first to be made under the wartime espionage statutes, climaxed an investigation that has been under way since 1939.

Activities of the group, the FBI said here, centered about the attractive, well-poised Miss Buchanan-Dineen, born in Canada, but educated in Toulouse, France.

In Washington J. Edgar Hoover, head of the FBI said she came to the United States in 1941. He added that she had operated under the surveillance of the FBI, and all information reported to her and forwarded to her Nazi espionage superiors abroad had cleared through the FBI and army and navy intelligence services.

In Detroit, Miss Buchanan-Dineen resided in an apartment in East Jefferson avenue next to a United States naval armory. During her year and a half here she had been well received socially and made numerous lectures before women's groups, principally about the life of women in war-torn Europe and the use of ersatz products in Europe.

Mrs. Behrens was born in Yugoslavia, of German parents. She came to Detroit in 1913 and became a naturalized citizen in 1929, listing her occupation as a social worker. The FBI said she had made numerous trips to Germany from the time of her arrival here until 1939.

Exchange Surgeon
Dr. Thomas was born in Fresno, Ohio, and in 1928 served as an exchange surgeon in St. George hospital, Hamburg, Germany. He has practiced in Detroit since 1930.

Hoffman was born in St. Thomas, Ontario. The FBI said he was a frequent visitor to the German restaurant once operated by Max Stephan, convicted of treason and now serving a life sentence for aiding a Nazi flyer who escaped from a Canadian prison camp.

Hoffman was held in $50,000 bail when arraigned in Brooklyn before United States Commissioner Edward E. Pay and awaited removal proceedings to return him to Detroit.

WEATHERMAN PLACES COUNTY FEED SUPPLY IN DANGER ZONE

With burned pastures, fired corn, short hay, dwindling winter feed supplies, and continued hot, dry weather, county dairymen have been dealt a poor hand and the county feed supplies placed in the danger zone, according to County Farm Agent Ralph F. McHenry.

McHenry estimated the normal feed grain production in the county at 6,000 tons and said that this year's yield will not be over 4,000 tons. Even in normal times, he explained, approximately 18,000 tons of grain and milled feeds must be shipped into the county and prospects indicate that about 22,000 tons must come in this year in addition to what is grown here.

Although this was a good hay year, McHenry said, the long drought subsequent to the hay harvest and the present dried up pastures are requiring farmers to use hay normally held over. He added, however, that no hay shortage is anticipated until spring.

To replenish the supplies being used this summer, McHenry suggested some good fall pasture. Rye sown just as soon as the ground can be worked this fall makes an excellent fall pasture and a high-yielding spring pasture, he said.

Perdue's car was in front, Powers said, adding that the driver started to turn to the left at the intersection of the streets but turned back into the path of Mrs. Athey's car.

This was despite Mrs. Robar's insistence that none of her children's births had kept her off her feet for more than a few hours. She spent ten days in a hospital when her first child, Corp. Bernard R. McCartney, was born of a former marriage. Since then she's had her children at home, including the one born Wednesday.

"It wasn't long before I was feeling all right again, so I thought I might just as well go back to work. The girls of the final-inspection department simply called me a liar when I told them my baby had come at 4 o'clock that afternoon."

Her mother and a daughter were ready to look after the children. Mrs. Robar said, adding that her hoped-for temporary job could not be war work. That would entail a release from the Koppers company and "there's no reason for that because I'm going back as soon as they'll let me."

CHAPTER FORTY-ONE

There they stood, Marty and the little boy, holding hands, each wearing that sort of sheepish grin, with almost the entire household, Karen, her father, Cousin Ellen and Paul, and the newspaperman Ray Atkins, waiting for an explanation. Karen was not nearly so interested in that as she was in the fact that Buffy was back—and alive and well. Besides that, nothing else was very important to her. That put an end to the terrible fears, the horrible nightmare.

"I tell you I didn't kidnap him," Marty said, as if saying it not for the first time, but in repeated denial. "What should I want to do a thing like that for? Why would I have brought him back, as soon as I could, if I had?"

"You don't expect us to believe the story you cooked up, do you?" Paul asked, as if he had said much the same thing before, too. This must have been the commotion Karen had heard going on before she jumped up from the dinner table to investigate for herself. "A little kid like Buffy could hardly find his way clear across town, across the bridge even, to your trailer camp. Not all by himself, not unless you..."

"So that's it!" Karen broke in. Light was beginning to seep through her jumbled emotions, clarifying things. Buffy had gone to see Marty, as indeed Karen had gone herself, when Marty had not come to see him. "You said yourself, Paul, that probably Buffy had run away, that all boys did such things at times."

"I agree with Paul that there still may be something fishy about this," Roy Atkins put in, pursuing his lips, his eyes looking Martin over carefully. "There's something about you... as if I'd seen you before this... what did you say your name was, mister?"

"I didn't say," Martin returned quietly, but the grin had left his face. He looked as if he were beginning to get angry and as if, when he did, which was seldom, people had better watch what they said or what questions they asked. "I am a friend of the family, I hope, certainly of Karen's, and of Buffy's."

"I warned Karen," Paul began, his dark face flushing up, too, his dark eyes smoldering. "There's nothing to warn me about." Karen did the interrupting this time. "Marty is my friend, and Buffy's. I guess there is something fishy about it, though, as you suggested, Mr. Atkins. I had promised Buffy he could go spend a few days with Martin at the camp because they had planned a fishing trip. But first one thing and then another put the plans off. I suppose Buffy got tired, as a little boy would, of waiting. I suppose he thought he would just go. Was that it, dear?" She smiled at the little boy now, for the grin had left his face, too, and he looked frightened and bewildered.

Now he nodded his head emphatically, but he still clutched Martin's hand tightly, not letting go of it to cross to Karen, although she did not look as if she were going to scold very much. Marty had made him realize he had done something wrong. That was why he had made him come straight home again, stopping only long enough to get him a sandwich and a cool drink, since Buffy had been tired and hungry and hot after his long adventure. But even Marty had not made him think what he had done was as important and as awful as it now appeared with all these people staring and talking.

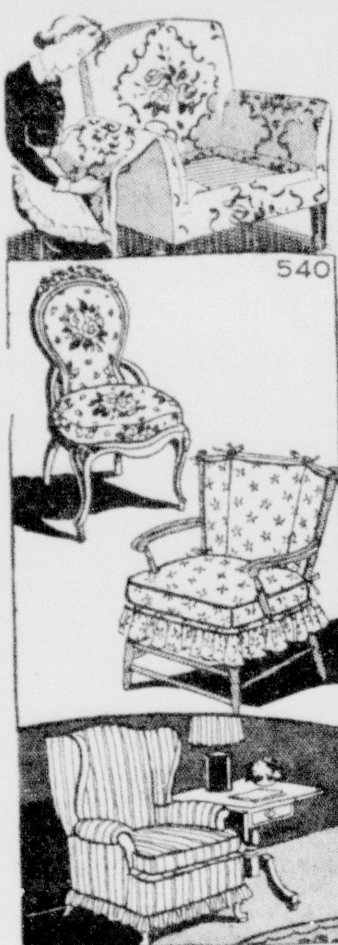

"Well, young man," Jim Bell cleared his throat which seemed to have got tight, although there was a suspicion of a twinkle in his tired eyes, "you certainly managed to give us a scare, although I'm thankful that's all it now amounts to—and grateful to you, young man," he gave Martin a nod and a look that acknowledged their acquaintance. If not long friendship, "for bringing the boy home safely."

"Still looks like a story somewhere to me," the newspaper man murmured, his gaze still fastened intently on Martin. "And of course it will be necessary for me to turn one in—a story of some sort—since the broadcast has been put through by now. Did you say your name was Martin?"

"I didn't say," Marty replied in that same quiet tone, "but his face now was stony, unrevealing. "I tried to make Buffy realize he had done the wrong thing, sir." He addressed himself deliberately to the boy's grandfather, ignoring the other two men. "I think he does now. I told him how worried you and his aunt would be. If there had been any means of sending a message I should have done so; I brought him back as soon as possible. And—in case you feel he must be punished further—I might add it is partly my fault. As Karen said, I had promised the boy a fishing trip. I had neglected to explain we would still carry that promise through and I suppose, as Karen said, too, a fellow, no matter how little or how big, gets impatient when such pleasure is put off too long and so takes matter rather into his own hands."

"I understand," Jim Bell's eyes were twinkling unmistakably now. "I'm something of a fisherman myself. And if Buffy is made to understand how worried all of us were, that we thought he was lost or hurt, sent out a radio broadcast, were about to inform the police, I guess maybe he will be punished sufficiently and promise never to do such a thing again."

"I think so, sir. And I am glad you did not inform the police," Martin's jaw was grim.

"Why not?" Paul asked lightly

"And why don't you give my friend, Mr. Atkins your full name? Because you know he is a newspaper man? As he just said, some explanation will have to be given out."

"We can simply say 'Buffy was found and returned home safely.' Karen was angry now with Paul for the insinuations beneath his words and tone and whole bearing. How could he treat Marty that way when Marty had brought Buffy home, when Paul knew nothing against him except some unfounded rumors and suspicions? Karen herself discarded her misgivings over the diathermy machine as of no consequence and although it was evident Marty still wished to avoid any contact with the police, she would attach no significance to that, either. She would believe in Marty to the end, no matter what that end might be. She did not have to put this into words. Her whole manner and tone and words proclaimed it.

"Thank you, Karen," Marty looked into her eyes a long moment as if they were alone, as if this were a matter to be settled only between them, and as if he again knew what was in her thoughts. Then he looked at Paul's friend. "My name, in record, is Martin Holiday."

"Why don't you ask him what his business is?" Paul said. He said it lightly, too, yet with that under-run away again. Won't you come here dear? And won't you stay awhile, Marty?" Her father joined in warmly with her belated hospitality. "No, thank you, sir," Martin said politely. "Another time, perhaps. And I hope, Karen, when you feel Buffy has earned it, that we still can have that fishing trip together." "You certainly may!" She flashed her warmest smile at him. "I see now I'm at fault, too. I've been so busy with war work, so engrossed in my own personal affairs, that I guess I've neglected Buffy lately. I hope you do come over very soon again—to see all of us." (To Be Continued) current. He had not missed that exchange between this outsider and Karen. He was merely, as Karen's fiancé, trying to protect her, since obviously, she refused to protect herself or believe what he had already told her in regard to this trailer person.

Karen did not think it would be easy for her to forgive Paul for this last insult. He might remember Marty was in her home and had just done them all a big favor. She started to say something more in his defense, but it proved unnecessary, for Roy Atkins gave Marty one long final look that seemed to satisfy him—or maybe he suddenly recalled where he had seen or heard of him. Anyway, he said, using an entirely different tone, one almost of respect:

"It's okay, I'm sure. And none of my business what Mr. Haliday's business happens to be. I will see that the sort of brief notice you mentioned, Miss Bell, is written without mentioning your names."

"Thank you for everything," Karen said. "And Buffy, everything is all right now. I'm sure you'll never

LAST DAY || "A STRANGER IN TOWN"

JUSTICE FOR A NAZI!

BRIAN AHERNE, as a doughty Commando, leads a raid into Nazi-occupied Norway in this exciting scene from Columbia's "First Comes Courage," opening tomorrow at the Maryland theater. Erville Alderson, member of the Norwegian underground, looks on, while Merle Oberon feels no regret at seeing her Nazi husband shot.

Theaters Today

Story of Nazi Mutiny Bared by Merl Oberon

The morale of German troops in Norway has been weakened to such an extent that German soldiers—both officers and privates—have been seen in chains on board German ships bound for home. Marching in as conquerors, ruthlessly taking over quiet little Norwegian villages and committing acts of unbelievable cruelty on a gentle people, they were rendered useless to the Nazi cause through the flaming spirit of the loyal Norwegians—a spirit that is gradually demoralizing brute physical strength.

The untiring work of the Norwegian underground plays a large part in this situation that is giving the Nazi party leaders many a headache. These facts were revealed recently by Merle Oberon, co-star with Brian Aherne in Columbia's "First Comes Courage," which opens tomorrow at the Maryland theater. Miss Oberon, who returned from London just before she made this picture, became familiar with the workings of the Norwegian underground, and she injected many true-to-life touches into the picturization of this form of espionage.

"Kings Row" Will Open At Liberty Tomorrow

Ann Sheridan, Robert Cummings, Ronald Reagan and Betty Field top the cast of "Kings Row," the new picture which is scheduled to open tomorrow at the Liberty theater. The film, adapted from recent best-selling novel of the same name, is the story of two romances set against the background of a small midwestern town at the turn of the century.

Sam Wood, whose recent hits include such outstanding and prize-winning films as "Goodbye Mr. Chips," "Our Town," "Kitty Foyle"

"The Hard Way" Opens On Garden Screen Today

Opening today at the Garden theater is "The Hard Way," an appealing drama expertly acted by Ida Lupino, Dennis Morgan and Joan Leslie. The supporting cast is first-rate, too, and includes Jack Carson, Gladys George, Faye Emerson and Paul Cavanaugh.

and "The Devil and Miss Jones," directed the production from the script by Casey Robinson, based on Henry Bellmann's novel which was one of the best-sellers of the past decade.

Bob Steele Is Expert With Many Weapons

Bob Steele, popular western actor who is co-starred with Tom Tyler and Jimmie Dodd in "Santa Fe Scouts," Republic's newest Three Mesquiteers action drama, which comes tomorrow to the Embassy theater, is expert not only with a gun, but with several other weapons as well.

Bob, as befits a cowboy, can wield a lariat with a high degree of accuracy, and is also a better-than-average archer. Even if minus weapons

Cardinals Top Boston Braves In Ten Innings

Mort Cooper Gains Eighteenth Victory with 1-0 Shutout

BOSTON, Aug. 24 (AP)—Mort Cooper kept eleven hits, including a pair of two-baggers, well scattered today while gaining his eighteenth victory of the season for the St. Louis Cardinals with a ten-inning 1-0 shutout over the Boston Braves.

The Cardinal's ace righthander was assured his fifth white-washing of the campaign when, with one out in the tenth, Harry Walker singled and Stan Musial a three-bagger against the fence in right center.

Al Javery, who has pitched the Braves to their only two 1943 victories over the world champions, went the full distance and gave the Cards seven other hits, including a double by Walker.

While hurling the Cards to their fourteenth straight win over the Tribesmen, Cooper had six strikeouts and gave but one base on balls. Javery fanned one and passed three Cards while striving for his twelfth win.

The Braves managed to get runners as far as second base four times during the game and in the tenth, with one out, Jim Tobin batting for Eddie Joost, was credited with an infield hit when Mor-

Cooper failed to cover first base. After Charlie Workman flied out, Joe Burns, who ran for Tobin, went to second on Butch Nieman's single, but Phil Masi ended the game by

Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH

Winter Storage of Victory Garden

By DEAN HALLIDAY

Many of the vegetables growing in the Victory garden can be kept producing long after the first frost, if protected. Frequently there are two or three weeks of good growing weather following the first frost. Therefore, the wise gardener will have available a supply of hay or straw to throw over lettuce and other greens.

As illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, tomatoes and peppers can be saved from frost by pulling up the vines and hanging them, top down, in the garage or cellar. The fruits will continue to ripen.

Some gardeners prefer to remove the green tomatoes and lay them on a layer of straw in the cold frame or flats, as illustrated. Cover the frame with glass but allow ample ventilation.

Parsnips, salsify and horse radish can be left in the soil all winter. Kale is not harmed by light frosts and can be dug out from under the early snows if the ground has not frozen too hard. Broccoli, Brussels sprouts and cabbage will stand fairly stiff freezing.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

TWO SQUEEZES IN A HAND!
SQUEEZE PLAYS are rare enough at best, but to find two entirely different kinds of squeezes being made in the same deal is really something. Difference in opening lead can cause variation in the choice of play, and then there are times when one player merely figures out a hand in one manner while another does it in some other way.

That contract was a bit venturesome. North had decided to bid 6-Hearts if South's response to the Blackwood 5-No Trumps had been 6-Clubs, showing no kings at all. He held the grand slam knowing the opponents held one king, though not the trump king. The same 7-Hearts got bid at another table of the same duplicate, but there is no record of their bidding. Both of these declarers, however, made their contracts by means of squeezes.

break, and then built his squeeze. He took the club A and K and then ran four more hearts, holding the diamond Q-6 also as he laid down the last, with the diamond A-7 and spade J in dummy. West held his spade J to guard against dummy's 6, so had to throw a diamond from the K-J. The spade 6 was then tossed from dummy, whereupon the diamond A and Q got the last two tricks.

At the other table, West led the spade 5. South decided that was either a singleton or fourth-best, and that the spades wouldn't break. So he worked on his squeeze from the start. Winning the opener with the spade K, he scored two hearts, the diamond A and the club A and K, then his remaining four hearts. As the last was led, he also held the spade 9-3 and diamond Q, and dummy the spade A-Q-6 and club 9. West had to discard from the diamond K and his spade J-8-7. If a spade, the dummy's would all be good, and the club would be discarded. But West chose the diamond K, hoping his partner had the Q, but that, too, was disastrous, giving South the needed additional trick with the diamond Q.

Squirrel Season Nears but Nimrods Lack Ammunition

Extended Seasons No Benefit as Stores Are Unable To Get Shells

The early squirrel season in Allegany county is scheduled to open two weeks from tomorrow but many rods who failed to stock up on shotgun shells last year are going to be out of luck judging from reports from local hardware stores.

Three leading firms which do a big business in the sale of shells each year are completely out of ammunition now and no assurance has been given that there will be any available by September 15.

"We had some shells saved ago but we sold out," Orison Wilson of the Liberty Hardware Company said.

"We haven't had a shell on hand since last year," Bob Llewellyn of the Peoples Hardware Company, declared.

Discussing the disappearance of shells from the market, due to the manufacturers being engaged in making ammunition for the armed forces, George Zimmerman, of the Wilson Hardware Company said:

"We don't have a shell in the place but we still have bows and arrows."

One hunter remarked that if shells are not available when the hunting season comes in the boys might resort to the use of sling shots.

Seasons Are Extended

The squirrel season this year opens September 15 and closes October 15, which is two weeks longer than the September 15 to October 15 season in 1942. The upland game season this year is also longer than that of last year but these additional days will not benefit the hunter who is unable to purchase ammunition. The upland season opens November 15 and closes December 15.

Allegany County

Ends Fourth Month Without Fatality

Two Met Death in Traffic Accidents in Garrett County in July

were reported for Allegany county in July, marking the fourth successive month that the county has drawn a blank in the matter of deaths on the highway, according to the Maryland Traffic Safety Commission.

Two deaths, the first in February and the second in March, were reported this year compared to eight for the first seven months in 1940.

The report for July showed that four persons were injured in seven accidents in Allegany county. One of the accidents occurred in Cumberland but no one was injured.

Two Deaths in Garrett

Garrett county's traffic fatalities for the year were increased to five in July with the deaths of Pvt. Donald Frederick, of Uniontown, Pa., who succumbed when an army jeep crashed, and Wayne Luther Delaney who lost his balance and fell beneath the wheels of a truck.

Seven persons were injured in six accidents in Garrett county in the month.

The state report shows that there were 999 traffic accidents during month of July, resulting in injury to two deaths and 534 persons injured. The number of fatalities is compared with the total, as compared with July, 1942. The figures bring the totals, accidents of Maryland, for the year, up to 1,397 with 189 killed and 3,420 injured. The Maryland Traffic Safety Commission points out that many of these accidents are caused by equipment that has not been properly serviced. The vehicles on the roads were 99 traffic accidents during the year. The roads today are more than two years old, many of them badly needed to augment overtaking lanes, steering, etc.

The suggestion is made that, in the absence of state safety organizations, it upon himself to have his car thoroughly inspected and needed repairs and adjustments taken care of as soon as possible. The time for inspection and proper maintenance of all vehicles in use today will only be an aid to greater safety, but also will provide the life of personal transportation, which is badly in need of repairs to break public transportation systems.
